CRAWFORD D. HENING.

Crawford D. Hening, who will assume his duties as assistant professor in the Law School of the University this fall, was born in Philadelphia, on June 19, 1865. He prepared for college at the Episcopal Academy and entered the University Classical Course in 1882, and subsequently the Wharton School, graduating from the University with the Class of 1887 and receiving the Bachelor's degree. He read law with Charles Biddle, Esq., of the Philadelphia bar, and also for a time attended the Law School of the University. He was admitted to the Philadelphia bar in the spring of 1890, but on account of ill-health was obliged to move to New Hampshire two years later. He was admitted to the New Hampshire bar in the spring of 1894 and practiced in that state until 1901, when he removed to Philadelphia and since then has been engaged in practicing in this city. Last year he was a member of the faculty of the Temple College Law School.

Mr. Hening will devote his time to the Law Department, becoming one of the resident professors.
